All user stories that are currently in progress, or that are waiting to be developed.

In future sprints, MaineFrame will be selecting from the waiting and in-progress user stories and continue development the best way we see fit. Regarding tracking feature development. We will continue to use product backlogs to track the features we need to worry about and develop. Bi-weekly sprint meetings will be utilized to keep the team on track and productive. The highest priority user stories will be those delegated to earlier sprints.

As MaineFrame will continue to develop our product, UMaine Connect, the next overhaul will include monetization of the product. As it stands, UMaine Connect currently has no features that produce any monetary gain for the company. We are expecting to incur costs from hosting our website, utilizing Google Maps API, utilizing Firebase API, and associated domain name and SSL certificate costs. The company is looking to offset our anticipated costs as well as grow the brand.

MaineFrame plans to keep the current development team. Over the last 14 weeks, the development team has grown very strong. MaineFrame corporate leadership expects the development team to continue to make steady progress.

MaineFrame plans to continue to test our software as we develop. Alongside software testing, security and privacy are our other top concerns.
